Gill, Alexander, 1565-1635.

The sacred philosophy of the Holy Scriptures: laid down as conclusions in the articles of our faith, commonly called the Apostles creed. Pressed by the principles or rules taught and received in the light of understanding. Wherby it is made plaine to every one endued with reason, what the steadfastness of the truth and surety of God toward mankind is, concerning the attainment of everlasting happiness: and what is the glory and excellency of the Christian religion, over all heathenish idolatry, all Turkish, Jewish, Athean, and heretical infidelity. Written by Alexander Gill ... London, Printed by Ann Griffin for Iovse Norton, and R. Whitaker, 1635.
